

Training on the Impact of Recent Supreme Court Decisions on Disability Rights

Presented by: Christopher Knauf

USC Disability Law Professor and long-time disability rights attorney will share his thoughts on these very important topics! Get your questions answered!

What effect will the US Supreme Court decisions in Loper-Bright and Cummings have on disability rights?
Is the death of so-called "Chevron deference" concerning to the special ed world?
Can successful plaintiffs still obtain emotional distress damages under the ADA?

Until recently, courts gave deference to federal agencies who issued guidance on statutes like IDEA and ADA. Does the recent Loper-Bright decision mean that courts no longer enforce an agency's reasonable interpretation of the law? Does Cummings foreclose emotional distress damages from ADA litigation? Many are concerned about the impact this may have on their rights, those of loved ones, or those they serve.

Attend this Zoom training and learn:

- the difference between statutes, regulations, and case law
- the effect of recent decisions by the US Supreme Court and their impact on disability rights; and,
- possible future trends impacting disability rights
- can successful plaintiffs still obtain emotional distress damages following the Cummings decision?
